The Daily Courant.

Thurſday, July 6 1704

From the Amſterdam Gazette, dated July 11.

Venice, June 28.

THE Forreign Troops that are in the Ferrareze, have all agreed with Cardinal Aſtalli the Legate of Ferrara, to march out of it, and that the Pope's Troops ſhall guard the 2 ſides of the Po, to hinder the laying of any Bridge over that River; in purſuance of which Agreement, 4000 Men of the Troops of the Ferrareze are march'd towards the ſaid River with 12 pieces of Cannon; and the Imperial and French Troops are retir'd out of that Territory: But by Letters that are juſt come from Ferrara we learn, that this Affair is not quite ended yet; for the French complaining that the Imperialiſts kept Poſſeſſion of a Poſt within a Mile and an half of Stellata, have paſs'd the Po to Figuarolo, without any Oppoſition from the Eccleſiaſtical Troops; upon which the Germans have diſarm'd ſome of the Pope's Soldiers at Zelo, and taken 25 Dragoons Priſoners.

From the Rotterdam Gazette, dated July 10.

Paris, July 4. The laſt Courier from Italy brought the following News. The Grand Prior of France, perceiving that Cardinal Aſtalli forbore to execute the Pope's Orders, and make uſe of the Cenſures of the Church, to oblige the Germans to retire out of the Eccleſiaſtical Territories on their refuſal ſo to do; ſignified to Count Paulucci General of the Pope's Forces, that to ſhew his Reſpect for his Holineſs he was ready to retire with his Troops; but that ſeeing the Enemies had refus'd to withdraw out of the Ferrareze, he would drive them out. To make his words good, the Grand Prior caus'd his Grenadiers to paſs the Po near Stellata, and advance to Figuarolo, where General Viſconti was encamp'd with 2 or 300 Men: At their approach, the Enemy call'd out long live who? our Grenadiers anſwer'd, long live the Pope? and preſently kill'd the Guard and broke into the Enemies Quarter. General Viſconti was rous'd out of his Bed with the Alarm, and was forc'd to make his Eſcape in his Shirt, with ſeveral Officers. Part of the Soldiers were kill'd, the reſt eſcap'd. Our Grenadiers took Poſt at Figuarolo, and the Grand Prior has ſince reinforc'd them: And having drawn together 12 or 14 Battallions, and as many Squadrons, has paſs'd over to them, and driven the Enemy out of the Valleys of the Ferrareze.

From the Paris Gazette a la Main, dated July 7.

Paris, July 7. They write from Oſtiglia, the 28th of laſt Month, that the Enemies being inform'd the Grand Prior had forc'd the Poſt of Figuarolo; that he had a conſiderable Body of Foot there, and that more were preparing to paſs over the Po to him on 2 Bridges; thought fit to blow up the Towers of Serravalle, and march away in the Night with extraordinary Diligence; they are gone over the Tartaro and the Adige, to retire into the Veroneze. The King on the Receipt of this News, ſent the Courier that brought it to the Duke of Mantua, to give him an Account of it. The Duke gave the Courier a conſiderable Preſent, and immediately diſpatch'd a Gentleman to compliment his Majeſty on the Impetialiſts retiring out of the Mantuan; the King return'd Anſwer, that he would take care they ſhould not enter into it again.

Turin, June 27. The Siege of Vercelli is not rais'd as was ſaid in our former; What gave ground to that Report was this, A certain Ingenier being arriv'd at the Duke of Vendome's Camp, advis'd him to change the Diſpoſition of the Siege, and to remove the Batteries; the doing of which took up 2 days, during which time the Cannon not being heard to fire, it was taken for granted by ſome People that the Siege was rais'd, and ſo reported accordingly.

Thoulon, June 20. The Advice-Boat which the Count de Thouloufe ſent after the Enemies Fleet is come back, ſhe follow'd them as far as the Iſle of Majorca, and then left them. A Frigate of 36 Guns ſail'd out of our Road ſome days ago, and ſoon after came up with a Ship of 70 Guns; our Frigate being in doubt what Ship it was made up to her and hal'd her, but ſhe anſwer'd with a Broadſide, which kill'd ſome of our Men, and oblig'd the Frigate to run for't. 'Tis ſuppos'd this was ſome Engliſh Ship that was left at Villa franca. The Galleys of Naples are expected here, as alſo thoſe commanded by the Duke of Turſis, and thoſe from Carthagena, being all order'd to joyn the Count de Thouloufe; who deſigns to put to Sea the beginning of next Month with 45 Men of War, and 30 Galleys.

From the Amſterdam Gazette, dated July 8.

Warſaw, June 24. Two days hence the Election of a new King comes on again; but many are of Opinion that it will be put off from one time to another, till the return of 2 Expreſſes which the Cardinal Primate has ſent to France. Among the Candidates talk'd of by the Confederates, are reckon'd 2 Kings, 1 Elector, the Princes Alexander Sobieski, Conti, and Ragotski, the Dukes of Lorrain and Mantua, the Great General of the Crown, the Palatin of Poſnania, and Prince Radzioil great Chancellor of Lithuania. It may eaſily be judg'd, that moſt of the chief Candidates do not ſollicit this Honour, but are nam'd by the Confederates of their own Heads.

From the Amſterdam Gazette, dated July 11.

Warſaw, June 27. The 25th the Confederates met again in the Field. The Marſhal would have read the Reply he had drawn up againſt the Act of Confederacy made by the Royaliſts at Sendomir; but the Deputies of Plosko hindred him, interpoſing their Complaints that the King of Sweden had not kept his Word; that all their Palatinate was ruin'd; and that when the Swedes retir'd out of it, the Troops of the Houſe of Sapieha entred, pillaging all the Places they paſs'd through, and burning ſeveral Villages and Gentlemens Seats. To this Monſieur Sapieha, formerly great Treaſurer, and his Son, who were both preſent, made no Reply; but the Marſhal endeavour'd to appeaſe them, by propoſing to ſend Deputies to General Horn, the King of Sweden's Commiſſioner, to deſire him to take Care that ſuch Diſorders and all Contributions might ceaſe. The Cardinal Primate ſeconded him; but one of the Deputies declar'd, that if General Horn did not give a poſitive and final Anſwer the next day, he would enter his Proteſt againſt all that ſhould be done in his Abſence and go back to his Palatinat. After this, part of the

Reply

Reply abovementioned was read, and a certain Deputy finding fault that his Poliſh Majeſty was ſtil'd the Moſt Serene King Auguſtus in it, the Palatins of Siradia and Lencizia, as alſo the Caſtellan of Inoucolocilawie took him up very ſhort, and inſiſted that that Expreſſion ſhould by all Means be us'd. Yeſterday the Marſhal and a few of the Deputies met again, and adjourn'd till to day, becauſe the Grand General was ſeiz'd with a ſort of an Apoplexy.

From the Leiden Gazette, dated July 10.

Sendomir, June 20. The 16th 5000 Lithuanians and Saxons were detach'd over the Viſtula, under the command of Prince Wieſnowiski Caſtellan of Vilna, the Marſhal of the Confederacy, and a Saxon General. The 18th they fell in with 500 Swedes of the Army commanded by General Reinſchild, and attack'd them with ſo great Courage, that they cut all of them in pieces except 20 that eſcap'd. The Saxons had given Quarter to ſeveral of them, particularly to ſome Officers; but the Lithuanians took them out of their Hands and put them to the Sword. On our ſide 16 were kill'd in this Action; and 56 wounded, Lieutenant Collonel Steinau and 5 othet Saxon Officers mortally.

The Letters from Dantzick of the 28th of June adviſe, that all the Troops the King of Sweden had in Pruſſia are in full march towards Warſaw; the King himſelf paſs'd the Viſtula at Graudentz the 26th with the Foot to follow his Cavalry who were advanc'd before.

Letters from Coningsberg, and from Berlin ſay, Monſieur Potocki Palatin of Kiovia was elected King of Poland by the Confederates the 26th of June. Which not agreeing with the Advices that came directly from Warſaw, is not credited.

From the Amſterdam Courant, dated July 12.

From the Detachment commanded by the Baron de Trogne, encamp'd at Breſſe on the Mehaigne, July 5. Being reinforc'd at Tourine by 800 Men from Huy, we march'd to the Enemies Lines at Meerdorp, and took Poſt within them; but after we had been there from 8 in the Morning till 7 in the Evening, without hearing any thing of the Enemy, the Baron receiv'd an Order from Monſieur d'Auverquerque to return back, becauſe the Army that was to come up to us had been ſtop'd by the overflowing of the River Demer, and could not joyn us with ſufficient Expedition.

Maeſtricht, July 9. We are hard at work to embark 50 Cannon and 12 Mortars with Ammunition proportionable, in order to ſend them up the River. Our Army is encamp'd near St. Tron. Namur will be bombarded, and the Lines by Meerdorp and Waſeige formally attack'd. Had the Baron de Trogne, who was Maſter of the Lines at Meerdorp a whole day, been ſupported in time, it would have ſav'd much Blood. He had no ſooner quitted them, but Monſieur de Gaſſe came hurrying thither with 8000 Men.
